Shohei: Did you watch the ekiden during New Year's?

John: (1) You kidding? I never miss the Hakone ekiden. Komazawa University won this year, right?

Shohei: That's right. Second win in three years. And (2) guess what, roadside spectators were allowed for the first time in three years, so I actually went to see them!

John: What? (3) So did I. Ha-ha, so we were both there then. I couldn't believe how fast they actually run. They *whiz past you and are gone in a flash.

Shohei: Right, their speed is like me sprinting, only I'd never be able to keep that pace up for that long.

John: That bit about sweeping all collegiate ekiden's titles in one season, is that amazing or what?

Shohei: Yeah, and the races are so close to one another too. The Izumo ekiden in October, the national championship in November, and then Hakone.

John: What a year for them.

Shohei: Komazawa had a 30-second lead from the previous day. (4) Kind of close, don't you think? The pressure to pull off the sweep must have been tremendous.

John: Yeah, of course, but the race itself is a mission! The mountainous course through the hot spring resort is full of steep hills and downslopes. I think we should give it up for every runner that was in the race.

Shohei: Yes, (5) well done everybody!

* whiz (風のように) 素早く動く

12月10日は、国連が定める「世界人権デー」です。世界人権宣言が採択されたのを記念して定められました。

International Human Rights Day

Do you know what day Dec. 10 is? It's International Human Rights Day! This celebrates the adoption by the United Nations in 1948 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

So, what are human rights exactly? These are basic rights and freedoms guaranteed to people everywhere regardless of their age, gender, race or nationality. There is a wide variety of human rights. These can be divided into seven different categories.

The first category is (1) rights such as the right to life and the right to marry whoever you want. The second category is civil and (2) rights such as the right to vote and freedom of speech. The third category is social and (3) rights such as the right to food, shelter, health care and employment. The fourth category is minority rights, which includes the rights of ethnic minorities and Indigenous people. The fifth category is women's rights, such as the right to political participation and equal pay for equal work. The sixth category is children's rights, such as the right to education and protection from harm. The seventh category is (4) rights, such as the right to clean air and water.

Let's take this special day to think about the importance of human rights, to protect the rights of people in our communities and to support organizations working for human rights around the world!
